

Book Workshop Outline

The workshop can be adapted to one class or an entire student body. Portland Power tales included grades K-5th grade, which was 180 children. All conflicts are resolved without violence utilizing encouraging words, friendship; super powers are welcomed that are original and helpful.

1. Three categories of story plots are presented of which they vote on.
2. Each class contributes their character ideas, action, plot and dialogue on a white board or flip book.

3. I write the story incorporating all their ideas and imbuing them with engaging adjectives and colorful imagery.
4. Pages are put into story boards and each child draws a black and white illustration for individual pages. The finished book is 8 x10 so the kids can color it.
